SOLDIERS AND SAILORS

OF THE

REVOLUTIONARY WAR.

A COMPILATION FROM THE ARCHIVES,

PREPARED AND PUBLISHED BY THE

SECRETARY OF THE COMMONWEALTH

IN ACCORDANCE WITH CHAPTER 100, RESOLVES
OF 1891.

WRIGHT & POTTER PRINTING CO., STATE PRINTERS, 18 POST OFFICE SQUARE.
1896.

PREFACE.

THE General Court of 1891, by chapter 100 of its resolves, directed the Secretary of the Commonwealth to prepare and publish "An indexed compilation of the records of the Massachusetts soldiers and sailors who served in the army or navy during the Revolutionary War, as shown in the archives in the office of the Secretary." The work was begun in September of 1891 by making a card record index to all names found upon the muster rolls, pay rolls and other documents which form the Revolutionary War archives. The Revolutionary collection at that time numbered sixty volumes of rolls, orders, receipts, etc., together with the continental regiment books, numbering twenty-one volumes of individual pay accounts. The work on this collection had been nearly completed when a mass of rolls and miscellaneous papers was purchased, under authority of chapter 33 of the Resolves of 1893, from Mr. Samuel A. Drake. This addition is equivalent in amount of material to two volumes and is now known as the Drake collection. Subsequent to this extension of the Revolutionary series, in 1894, a large number of company and regimental returns, descriptive lists, orderly books, account books, etc., making fourteen new volumes, were found among a miscellaneous, unclassified collection of documents which had been hidden away for years in the various storage places connected with the Secretary's office. Although much more time had been occupied in preparing the work for printing than had been originally estimated, it was deemed proper to incorporate these newly found records in the regular work, rather than to add a supplement; and this was accordingly done. It will be seen that the original Revolutionary rolls collection has been augmented by sixteen volumes, and it is estimated that the number of references to individual records of service has been increased at least one-third. It is from the card record index, comprising over six hundred and twenty thousand cards, that copy has been prepared for the printer. In the mean time, the card record index itself has been in use to answer thousands of requests for certificates of service.

The arrangement of records in the printed volumes is the same as that of the card record index. The alphabetical arrangement of the names forms in itself an index to the work, and the plan of placing against each name every entry of separate and distinct service that could be identified as belonging to it reduces the task of searching for the record of any given individual to a minimum.

In crediting service to any given individual, no attempt has been made to force identification where a person of similar name has been found upon the rolls as serving at a distinct and separate interval of time, in a different command and without any place of residence stated. Many of the rolls furnish no proof whatever as to residence of the men borne upon them. In addition to this fact, the practice of repeating common family names in various branches of the same family, which was in vogue at the period of the Revolution, rendered it unsafe to group together records of service merely because of similarity of names. The principle was adopted of bringing together scattered records of service and crediting them to one individual where identification was proven by place of residence, by continuous service, or by service in the same command at not too widely separated intervals, when it might be fairly presumed that the proofs of continuous service had failed of preservation and were only lacking from the state's collection. All records that failed to meet these tests are simply printed as they are found, and must stand as unidentified. Again, it may happen that records of service of a given individual are separated by reason of a difference in spelling, or by the use at different times of obsolete or distorted forms of the same name. In order to render accessible to the searcher such individual records as may be separated by this cause, reference is made against the modern or approved form of a name to every variation from it to be found in the index, it being understood that in every case the names are printed exactly as found upon the original documents. By this means, where a record credited to any given individual appears incomplete, an examination of the various forms of the name will often result in supplying the missing information: although it must be borne in mind that full and complete records of service are not to be looked for in all cases, as the documentary proof is lacking from the archives, either because it has disappeared through a lack of proper care in the preservation of such material in former years, or because it never found its way into the custody of the Secretary's office. This is notably the case with regard to the year 1776, there being fewer rolls for service during that year than of any other during the period covered by the Revolutionary War.

A discrepancy will sometimes be found between the time allowed for a term of service and the actual time shown by the dates of enlistment and discharge. This arises from the practice then in vogue of including in the term of service performed, an allowance, in days, for the distance travelled between the place of service and the respective homes of the men enlisted. This obtained in all militia service and every twenty miles of travel was reckoned as an additional day. Any difference that may be found, therefore, of the kind above noted, is explained by the custom of making such allowances and simply means that travel is included in the service credited.

It is to be regretted that the records of naval service during the Revolution in the possession of the Commonwealth, should be so meagre and incomplete as compared with those of military service, inasmuch as history records that the service rendered by the men of Massachusetts afloat was equally as creditable and meritorious as that rendered by the land forces. By far the greater part of such service was performed by privateers, and, these being matter of private enterprise, no official returns of officers or crews were required. Save the records of commissions granted to commanders of privateers, an occasional crew list sworn to on clearance before naval officers is all that is to be found among the state archives to furnish proof of privateer service. Such records of naval service as there are consist mainly of rolls of state armed vessels, as they were called, made up for pay due officers and men for service performed during each cruise or term of engagement. But even these records do not show continuous service of such vessels in commission and are fewer in number than might be expected.

There are included among the records published some of men who served in various Rhode Island regiments and in the First New York Regiment, fifty rolls and lists of the former and about a dozen of the latter being comprised in the Massachusetts Revolutionary Rolls collection. It was thought best to embody them here, as it was exceedingly doubtful whether they would otherwise ever be put in print.

The following summary of the legislation of the Province and Commonwealth during the Revolutionary War period is by Mr. James J. Tracy, Chief of the Archives Division of this office, who has had immediate charge of the entire work of compilation. Acknowledgment is due here of the intelligent and painstaking manner in which he has performed his duty.

WILLIAM M. OLIN,

Secretary of the Commonwealth.

REVOLUTIONARY WAR LEGISLATION

OF THE

PROVINCE AND COMMONWEALTH.

IN the First Provincial Congress, on the 26th of October, 1774, a committee, appointed "to consider what is necessary to be done for the defence and safety of the Province &c," made a report, upon which a resolve was immediately passed, making provision for the appointment of a Committee of Safety, who were empowered and directed, "when ever they shall judge it Necessary for the safety and Defence of the Inhabitants of this province and their Property against such person or persons as aforesaid to alarm, muster, and cause to be assembled with the utmost expedition, and compleatly armed accourtied and supplied with provisions sufficient for their support in their march to the place of Rendezvous, such and so many of the Militia of this Province as they shall judge necessary for the ends aforesaid". Provision was made for the pay and subsistence of the force so assembled, and for the appointment of general officers. It was also resolved that such companies of the existing militia as had not already chosen officers should do so forthwith, and where said officers should "Judge the limits of the present Regiments too extensive," they should divide them and adjust their limits and proceed to elect field officers to command the regiments so formed. The field officers so appointed were directed to endeavor "to enlist one quater at ye least of the Number of the respective Companies, and form them into Companies of Fifty privates at the least who shall Equip and hold themselves in Readiness on the shortest notice from the said Committee of Safety to March to the place of Rendezvous, and that each and every Company so formed Choose a Captain & two Lieutenants to Command them on any such Emergent and necessary Service as they may be called to by the Committee of Safety aforesaid and that the said Captain & Subalterns so elected form the said Companies into Battalions to consist of Nine Companies each, and that the Captains & subalterns of each Battalion so formed proceed to Elect Field Officers to Command the same." It was also recommended that the inhabitants of the province provide themselves with arms and equipments "and perfect themselves in the Military skill," and that, if any were not provided with arms and ammunition, according to law, or if any town or district were not provided with the full town stock of arms and ammunition, according to law, the selectmen of such town or district were to take effectual care, without delay, to provide the same. This same resolve of the Provincial Congress provided for the purchase by the Committee of Safety of cannon, small arms, ammunition and ordnance stores, to the value of £20,837, to be deposited in such secure places as the Committee of Safety should direct.

The minute-men were organized under this resolve, and it accounts for the promptness with which they assembled in response to the alarm of the 19th of April, 1775. It is a notable fact that the rolls for that service are in better form and better prepared than any others in the possession of the Commonwealth. Of course but a small fraction of those credited with service at the time of the Lexington alarm took part in the actual affair of that day, but the minute-men who assembled and marched to Cambridge and Roxbury on that alarm formed the nucleus of the first army organized, which later, under Washington, laid siege to Boston.

On the day following the passage of the resolve above mentioned, the Committee of Safety and three general officers were appointed, Jedediah Preble, Artemas Ward and Seth Pomeroy being chosen as first, second and third in command respectively.

Oct. 29, 1774, a resolve was passed that an extract from the resolves relative to the militia be printed and a copy thereof sent to every town and district in the province, and two additional members were appointed on the Committee of Safety.

Under date of Dec. 8, 1774, John Thomas and William Heath were chosen as general officers in addition to those previously appointed.

Dec. 10, 1774, the committee on the state of the province reported to the Provincial Congress an address "To the Freeholders and other Inhabitants of the Towns and Districts of Massachusetts Bay," which was accepted and ordered to be printed in all the Boston newspapers and also in hand bills, and a copy thereof sent to all the towns and districts in the province. In this address, after a recital of the grievances and oppressions laid upon the people of the province and of the necessity of guarding their rights and liberties, the following reference is made to the need of military preparation: "The improvement of the Militia in general in the Art Military has been therefore thought necessary, & strongly recommended by this Congress. We now think that particular care should be taken by the Towns and Districts in this Colony, that each of the minute men not already provided therewith, should be immediately equipped with an effective Fire arm, Bayonet, Pouch, Knapsack, Thirty rounds of Cartridges and Ball, and that they be disciplined three times a week and oftener as opportunity may offer. To encourage these our worthy Countrymen to obtain the skill of complete soldiers, we recommend it to the Towns & Districts forthwith to pay their own minute men a reasonable consideration for their services.—And in case of a general Muster, their further services must be recompensed by the province. An attention to discipline the militia in general is however by no means to be neglected." On the same day a resolve was passed, directing "That a Gentleman be appointed in each County, to apply to the Field Officers of the Regiments within the same, for the List of the names of the Field Officers of each Regiment, the number of other Officers, and the number of the Men therein, as well the minute men as the common Militia, and return the same unto Mr. Abraham Watson at Cambridge."

The Second Provincial Congress, on the 9th of February, 1775, confirmed the powers of the Committee of Safety, repeated the recommendations of the previous congress relative to the militia, and appointed Jedediah Preble, Artemas Ward, Seth Pomeroy, John Thomas and William Heath, as general officers, ranking in the order named, to command the troops when called into service. Feb. 14, 1775, another general officer was chosen in the person of John Whitcomb. On the same day, a resolve was passed recommending that the commanding officers of each regiment of minute-men, formed or to be formed, or of any separate companies, review their respective commands, and make return of their numbers and equipment to the congress at the beginning of the next session, and the colonels of the militia regiments of the province were recommended to do likewise.

April 5, 1775, the congress passed a resolve embodying articles, rules and regulations for the Massachusetts army "that may be raised for the defence and Security of our lives, liberties and Estates," and on April 8, appointed delegates to repair to Connecticut, Rhode Island and New Hampshire, to inform them of the determination of Massachusetts to raise and establish an army for her security and defence, and to request the co-operation of those colonies by furnishing their respective quotas for general defence.

Five days later, April 13, the Committee of Safety was authorized to form "six Companies of the Train for the Artillery already provided by this Colony to immediately enter on discipline, and constantly be in readiness to enter the service of the Colony when an Army shall be raised;" and the committee were empowered "to draw on the Public Treasury for paying said Companies a suitable consideration for their services."

The events of the nineteenth of April brought matters to a crisis, and on Sunday, April 23, the Provincial Congress, then sitting at Watertown, passed the following resolves:—

Resolved unanimously that it is necessary for the defence of the Colony that an Army of 30,000 Men be immediately raised and established.

Resolved, That 13,600 Men be raised immediately by this Province.

The Committee of Safety had already, on the 21st of April, resolved that an army of 8,000 men be enlisted, but this of course was superseded by the action of the Provincial Congress.

On the 25th of April, it was moved and passed unanimously by the Provincial Congress that the companies in each regiment be reduced from 100 men each to 50 men, including 3 officers. It was also moved and passed that each regiment be reduced to ten of such companies.

April 26, the Committee of Safety resolved that as many men out of the minute companies assembled as had not already enlisted into the army should do so immediately, that the quota to be raised from the towns might be known as soon as possible. And again, on April 29, they voted that orders be sent to the neighboring towns requiring that one-half the militia be immediately sent to Roxbury and Cambridge and the remainder hold themselves in readiness to march at a minute's warning. This was followed by a resolve passed by the Provincial Congress on the 4th of May, providing for granting advance pay to soldiers enlisting in the army to be raised, and the sum of 20s. was allowed to each private and non-commissioned officer who should so enlist; and two days later, Gen. John Whitcomb and Col. Benjamin Lincoln were appointed muster masters of the Massachusetts army, to muster and swear in all able-bodied and effective men who should enlist, and to pay over the advance money to all such as passed muster. Later, Col. Asa Whitcomb was appointed to serve as muster master in place of Gen. John Whitcomb, who declined his appointment. On the same day, May 4, the Committee of Safety transmitted a letter to the governor of Connecticut, requesting the authorities of that colony to send forward three or four thousand men, without delay, in consideration of the pressing and urgent need of the colony of Massachusetts. A similar letter was sent to the governor of Rhode Island.

At the sitting of May 8, 1775, the Provincial Congress established the form of an oath to be administered to the officers and private soldiers of the army; and, as such obligation cannot fail to be of interest, it is given herewith:—

Resolved, That all officers and soldiers of the Massachusetts army now raising for the defence and security of the rights and liberties of this and our sister colonies in America, shall each and every of them excepting only the General Officers, repeat and take the following Oath, viz: "I, A. B., swear, I will truly & faithfully serve in the Massachusetts army, to which I belong, for the defence and security of the estates, lives and liberties of the good people of this & the sister colonies in America, in opposition to ministerial tyranny by which they are or may be oppressed, and to all other enemies & opposers whatsoever; that I will adhere to the rules & regulations of sd army, observe & obey the generals & other officers set over me: and disclose and make known to said officers all traiterous conspiracies, attempts and designs whatsoever which I shall know to be made against said army or any of the english american colonies, so help me God."

At a later period the form of oath administered on enlistment was simplified.

On the same day the foregoing resolve was passed, a committee was appointed with instructions to inquire into the state of the army at Roxbury and Cambridge, and if they found the numbers thereof reduced, to advise the Committee of Safety to send out immediately for reinforcements. In accordance with this resolve, it was ordered by the Committee of Safety that the commanding officers of the militia of the towns of Dorchester, Dedham, Newton, Watertown, Waltham, Roxbury, Milton, Braintree, Brookline and Needham, immediately muster half the militia and all the minute-men and march them forthwith to Roxbury, to strengthen the camp there. This action was followed, on the 10th of May, by a resolve of the Provincial Congress, directing the general officers to call in all soldiers enlisted in the service of the colony, and to order all enlisted soldiers and others in camp to remain until further orders from the congress. On this latter date, also, it was resolved to augment the train of artillery from six companies to ten companies.

The twentieth day of May, 1775, Gen. Artemas Ward was sworn and received his commission as commander-in-chief and commissions were issued to various colonels and other officers, so that the organization of the Massachusetts army, as it was called, may be considered as fairly entered upon at this date, although a large proportion of the officers and men had been continuously in service from their arrival in camp in response to the alarm sent out the 19th of April and they are credited with such service upon the rolls preserved among the state archives.

At a sitting of the Third Provincial Congress, held on the 3d of June, 1775, a committee was appointed to consider the advisability of raising a reinforcement to the Massachusetts army for the protection of the seacoasts. This committee reported, on the 7th of the same month, that it was inexpedient to augment the forces already ordered to be established; but on the 17th of June it was recommended, by resolve, that the militia in all parts of the colony hold themselves in readiness to march at a minute's warning to the relief of any place that might be attacked, or to the support of the army, with at least twenty cartridges, or rounds of powder and ball, and this recommendation was ordered to be printed and distributed throughout the colony. It had already been resolved on the 13th of June that 23 regiments be commissioned, exclusive of the regiment of matrosses, and on the 24th of June the congress ordered that communications be prepared and sent to the governments of Connecticut, Rhode Island and New Hampshire, appealing for haste in forwarding their respective quotas of reinforcements to the army, stating the dangerous position of affairs, the fact that the full number of men ordered to be raised was still deficient, and pointing out the urgent necessity of co-operation.

The defence of the seacoasts had occupied the attention of congress for some time, owing to the constant appeals of the inhabitants thereon, and their representations as to their unprotected condition. Accordingly, on the 28th of June, 1775, resolves were reported to provide forces for their protection. Ten companies were ordered to be raised in Essex Co.; nine companies in the counties of Plymouth and Barnstable, four to be stationed in Plymouth Co. and the remainder in Barnstable Co.; two companies in Bristol Co.; four companies in York Co.; five companies in Cumberland Co.; three companies in Lincoln Co.; and one company to be raised in Falmouth and stationed on the Elizabeth Islands. These companies were to consist of 50 men each, including officers, and were to be under the direction of the committees of correspondence of the respective towns wherein they might be stationed, or of a joint committee from the towns on the seacoast in the county wherein they were raised, save those in Plymouth, Barnstable and York counties, which were to be under the direction of the field officers of the county regiments. This was purely local service, and no term of enlistment was specified in the resolves; but enlisting orders were issued to raise men to serve from the date of their engagement to the last day of December, 1775. This special force for seacoast defence was renewed from time to time, throughout the war, as the terms of service expired.

On the 5th of July, 1775, a resolve was passed to provide each of the non-commissioned officers and soldiers of the army authorized to be raised under resolve of April 23, 1775, with a coat, and 13,000 were ordered to be provided by the towns and districts, in accordance with a regular apportionment. This gift of a coat was considered in the nature of a bounty, and later, at the time of their distribution, the men in service were permitted to choose between acceptance of the coat or a sum of money in lieu thereof. Although this distribution of coats was based on the needs of the estimated army of 13,600 men authorized to be raised, it is evident that nowhere near such a number was actually in service at the time of Washington's assuming command of the army, as, in a communication addressed by him to the Provincial Congress, under date of July 9, 1775, he states that the number of men, fit for duty, of the forces raised in the province did not amount to 9,000, all told, which, with the troops from the other colonies present in camp, composed an army of 14,500 effective men. He enclosed a copy of the conclusions of a council of war of the generals of the army, wherein it was agreed that the army should consist of at least 22,000 men, and advised the immediate filling up of the regiments to their intended establishment. Congress responded to this representation of the state of the army by providing for a temporary reinforcement, in a resolve passed July 12, 1775, wherein the commanding officers of the militia companies in the various towns were recommended to send forward men without delay, to serve for one month, until the new levies should be completed.

The next action of the Provincial Congress toward raising troops was on Aug. 7, 1775, when two companies were ordered to be raised, for service at the eastward, in the counties of Cumberland and Lincoln; said companies to be placed on the seacoast establishment, and to be stationed in those counties, in addition to one company already enlisted. Again, on August 16 and 19, two more companies were authorized to be raised on the same establishment, one to be stationed at Machias and the other at Gouldsborough and vicinity.

The Massachusetts army had by this time become merged in the continental army and the fact was formally recognized by a resolve passed Aug. 14, 1775, terminating all contracts made for victualling the troops by the colony and transferring the responsibility of providing supplies to the Continental Commissary General.

The need of augmenting the forces under Washington by this time had manifested itself to the Continental Congress, for on Nov. 4, 1775, it was —

Resolved, That the new army intended to lie before Boston consist of 20,372 men, officers included.

In addition, the resolve provided that, if the necessity of the service required it, the general should be empowered to call forth the minute-men or militia of the Massachusetts Bay or the neighboring colonies; but this was later amended by a resolve that such call should not be made without having applied to and obtained the consent of the officers in whom were vested the executive powers of government.

It is not to be supposed that an essentially maritime people would be content merely with waging hostilities against a powerful enemy on land, and so, on Nov. 1, 1775, an act was passed entitled "An Act, for Encouraging the Fixing out of Armed Vessells, to defend the Sea Coast of America, and for Erecting a Court to Try and Condemn all Vessells, that shall be found infesting the same." This act empowered the council, or the major part of them, "to commission, with letters of marque and reprisal, any person or persons within this colony, who shall, at his or their own expence, fix out and equip, for the defence of America, any vessell, as also any person who shall, by the owner of such vessell, be recommended therefor; and that all persons so commissioned, as aforesaid, shall have full power, with such other persons as they shall engage to their assistance, to sail on the seas, attack, take and bring into any port in this colony, all vessells offending or employed by the enemy as aforesaid, and also to retake and bring in, as aforesaid, any vessell or vessells that may be taken from any person or persons by said enemy."

The master or owner of any vessel commissioned was required to give bond for the proper discharge of his duties and for the observance of the conditions of the act above noted, and courts were established for the trial and condemnation of prizes. A court was authorized to be held at Plymouth to try all cases of vessels taken and brought into the counties of Plymouth, Barnstable, Bristol, Dukes County and Nantucket; another, to be held at Ipswich, to have cognizance of all captures brought into Suffolk, Middlesex and Essex counties; and a third, to be held at North Yarmouth, to have cognizance of all captures brought into York, Cumberland and Lincoln counties.

This act was repealed Feb. 14, 1776, when another act, bearing the same title and of the same general tenor but making more specific provisions for the rights of claimants to vessels or cargoes condemned, was passed in its stead. Later, on March 19, 1776, the act of Feb. 14, 1776, was repealed and declared null and void. Another act, amending the original act of November, 1775, was passed April 13, 1776, and by this act courts for the trial and condemnation of captures were authorized to be held, if judged necessary or convenient, at Plymouth, Barnstable, Dartmouth, Boston, Salem, Ipswich, Newburyport, Falmouth and Pownalborough. Still another act in addition to the first act was passed on May 8, 1776, and this extended the authority of the courts established for the trial and condemnation of captures, to all vessels and merchandise belonging to inhabitants of Great Britain that should be "taken on the high seas, or between high-water and low-water mark."

Under the encouragement offered by the above enactments, privateering became a popular and lucrative service, and an active and harassing warfare was maintained for the whole period of the war by the privateers that swarmed from every port along the coast.

As the term of enlistment of the original levies for defence of the seacoasts had expired, a resolve was passed Jan. 1, 1776, for raising 1,200 men, to serve until Dec. 31, 1776, unless sooner discharged, and making full provision for their enlistment and establishment and directing the various points at which they should be stationed for service. Four additional companies were authorized to be raised for similar service at the eastward, on the same establishment, by a resolve of Jan. 13, 1776.

The beginning of a state naval establishment appears Jan. 11, 1776, when it was proposed that two ships should be built at the expense of the colony, one to carry 36 guns and the other to carry 32 guns; but the resolve was ordered to be re-committed before its final passage, and the committee were directed to report an estimate of the expense of building and furnishing said vessels. Nothing more would seem to have been done in the matter until Feb. 7, 1776, when a resolve was passed for building at the public expense ten sloops of war of 110 or 115 tons each, and appointing a committee to provide materials and employ proper persons to build said vessels and appropriating the sum of £10,000 for the purpose. On Feb. 17, 1776, however, the committee were empowered to suspend contracting for more than five vessels of the description given, and were authorized to purchase and equip five vessels already built of any rig or dimension they might consider suitable.

On the 19th of January, 1776, a resolve was passed in compliance with a request from General Washington, authorizing the enlistment of a regiment to reinforce the army in Canada; said regiment to be enlisted from the counties of Berkshire and Hampshire, to consist of 728 men, including officers, and to serve until the first of January, 1777, if required. At a later date, viz., Feb. 10, 1776, in order to encourage enlistments for this service, a bounty of 40s. in lawful money was offered in place of the two months' advance wages first promised. This fact is interesting as being the first direct offer of a money bounty for enlistment made in the war.

This call for troops was followed immediately by a resolve of Jan. 20, 1776, intended to meet the application of General Washington for a temporary reinforcement to strengthen the army investing Boston and maintain the lines and fortifications about the town. The colonies of Connecticut and New Hampshire had also been applied to for reinforcements and the quota required from Massachusetts was fixed at 4,368 men. This quota was apportioned to the various towns and districts of the colony by the resolve and it directed that the commanding officer of each company of militia, in the towns mentioned, should muster his command without delay and cause such number of men to enlist voluntarily as was set for each town's proportion; said soldiers to serve, on the continental establishment, from the date of their enlistment to the first day of April, 1776. The men enlisted were to be formed into companies of 90 men each and were to be assembled into six regiments and the same pay and allowances were granted them as were allowed to the men who had previously enlisted.

The need of regulating the militia and making them more available, both for local service and for responding to calls or drafts for reinforcements to the continental army, by this time had become evident, and on Jan. 22, 1776, an act was passed for "Forming and Regulating the Militia within the Colony of the Massachusetts Bay, in New England etc.," and repealing all former acts made for that purpose. In accordance with the provisions thereof, John Hancock, Azor Orne and Benj. Lincoln, were chosen as 1st, 2d and 3d major generals, respectively, of the militia of the colony, under date of Feb. 8, 1776, according to the records of the Provincial Congress. Brigadiers for the various counties were chosen at the same time, and later, Feb. 20, 1776, upon the report of a committee appointed to arrange the militia, the number of regiments to each county was fixed and established as follows: Suffolk Co., 5 regiments; Essex Co., 8 regiments; Middlesex Co., 7 regiments; Hampshire Co., 6 regiments; Plymouth Co., 4 regiments; Barnstable Co., 4 regiments; Bristol Co., 4 regiments; York Co., 4 regiments; Dukes Co., 2 regiments; Worcester Co., 8 regiments; Cumberland Co., 4 regiments; Lincoln Co., 6 regiments; Berkshire Co., 2 regiments.

Various measures were taken from time to time to insure the prompt response of the local militia to requests from the general commanding the army for temporary reinforcements, but no further calls for troops seem to have been made until April 9, 1776, when, in consequence of the evacuation of Boston and the necessity for placing it in a proper state of defence, and also because, in the judgment of the General Court, the continental forces left and stationed about the town were insufficient for such purpose, eight companies, of 90 men each, were ordered to be raised, to constitute one regiment and to serve from date of enlistment to Dec. 1, 1776. Later, that is, on April 22, 1776, a part of the seacoast defence forces were ordered to join and co-operate with this regiment in service at and about Boston: and on May 3, 1776, a company of artillery was ordered to be raised for the same service, but for a longer term, viz., from enlistment to May 2, 1777.

An act was passed May 3, 1776, authorizing a regiment of horse to be raised out of the several regiments of foot in the county of Worcester, to consist of eight companies of fifty able-bodied, effective men, exclusive of officers: the same to be raised by voluntary enlistments out of the training band or alarm list indiscriminately. This regiment was not raised for any special service, but to form a component part of the militia and to be governed by the laws provided for the regulation thereof.

Again, on May 7, 1776, another regiment, of 728 men, was ordered to be raised for the defence of Boston, to serve until Dec. 1, 1776, and six more companies of artillery were also provided for, to form, with the company previously mentioned, an artillery regiment and to serve for one year. Each soldier enlisting in these regiments was allowed, in addition to the usual sums for pay and travel allowance, a blanket, or 13s. 4d. in lieu thereof, on passing muster.

These measures seem to have sufficed for a time for local defence and the next call for troops was in response to a request from the Continental Congress that Massachusetts furnish her quota to reinforce the armies in Canada and New York. Accordingly, on June 25, 1776, a resolve was passed, directing that the necessary number of 5,000 men (3,000 destined for Canada and 2,000 for service at New York) be immediately raised from the training band and alarm lists, constituting the militia of the colony, in the proportions affixed to the various towns mentioned in a schedule embodied in the resolve, to serve until the first of December, 1776: the forces raised in the counties of Suffolk, Essex, Middlesex, Hampshire, York and Cumberland, to be destined for Canada, and to be formed into four battalions of 750 men each ; while those raised in the counties of Plymouth, Bristol, Worcester and Berkshire, to be destined for New York, and to be formed into three battalions of 660 men each, as nearly as possible. The bounty for the Canada service was fixed at £7, and for the New York service at £3 ; the same to be paid to each non-commissioned officer and soldier on passing muster.

On the 25th of June, 1776, another call was made by the Continental Congress, this time for an augmentation of the forces destined for Canada or the Northern department ; Massachusetts being requested to furnish at once two regiments or 1,500 men. It was proposed to forward the number called for out of the regiments already in service at and about Boston ; but the project was evidently not carried out, for it was resolved by the General Court on July 11, 1776, to raise two regiments to reinforce the troops destined for Canada, in accordance with the requisition of the Continental Congress, by a draft of every twenty-fifth man in the training band and alarm lists, exclusive of those already raised or ordered to be raised ; said regiments to serve until Dec. 1, 1776, unless sooner discharged. This was the first actual draft made, and it was provided that, if more than the number necessary for the two regiments resulted from the draft, they should be marched to the works or forts at or near Boston and remain subject to the orders and regulations of the council. The resolve also provided for the enforcement of the draft, by directing that if the number required was not enlisted from any town or plantation without delay and other attempts proved ineffectual, a draft should be made on a muster of the whole militia of such town or plantation ; and in case any person neglected to attend such muster, it was provided he should forfeit and pay a fine of £10 ; and, in case any person drafted should neglect or refuse to go upon such service, or neglect to procure an able-bodied, effective man in his stead, it was provided he should forfeit and pay the sum of £10 ; such fines, when imposed, to be paid within twenty-four hours, on penalty of an additional fine of £3. The same system of draft and forfeitures was made to apply to those towns which were delinquent in furnishing their proportion of the 5,000 men needed for New York and Canada.

Another draft soon became necessary, in consequence of the critical situation of the continental army at New York; and on Sept. 12, 1776, a resolve was passed for making a draft from the militia of every fifth able-bodied man under fifty years of age, save certain persons exempted by reason of occupation. Certain towns and counties were excepted from the provisions of this resolve, owing to their need of local security and defence. Penalties and forfeitures were imposed by this resolve similar to those quoted previously, with the addition of a term of imprisonment, not exceeding two months, for refusal to march or procure a substitute by any person drafted, upon conviction on an indictment or presentment by the grand jury of the county wherein said offence was committed. The troops so raised were to serve until recalled by the General Court, but later a term of two months was fixed for this service. The destination of one battalion was diverted, however, from New York to Rhode Island.

For the purpose of obtaining prompt and responsible direction of all military affairs a Board of War was established by a resolve of Oct. 26, 1776, which was to consist of nine persons, with power to order and direct the operation of the forces in the pay of the state, on land or sea, and provide all necessary stores, munitions of war, etc., for the purpose of carrying on the war.

The short terms of service required by drafts and enlistments, added to the probable deficiencies, notwithstanding the penalties imposed, made frequent calls necessary; and on Nov. 14, 1776, was passed "An Act for providing a Reinforcement to the American Army." This act provided that one-quarter part of all the able-bodied male persons within the state, from sixteen years and upward, not in actual military service (with certain exemptions), either by voluntary enlistment, lot or draft, should be appointed and held in readiness to march at a minute's warning, to serve for a term not exceeding three months, within and for the defence of any of the United States, when called out to reinforce the continental army by the General Court, or, in the recess thereof, by the council. It was provided, however, that in case the persons drafted or enlisting were not called into service before March 1, 1777, they should no longer be held under engagement. Fines, forfeitures and imprisonment, were imposed by this act for failure to comply with its provisions.

In order to replace the regiments stationed at and about Boston, whose terms of service were about expiring, sixteen companies were ordered to be raised by a resolve of Dec. 5, 1776, to be enlisted for the term of three years, unless sooner discharged. It was provided that the two regiments so raised should be employed in defence of the several posts in and near the harbor of Boston, but be obliged to do duty in any other part of the state if called upon to do so by the General Court or council.

Both legislature and people had become accustomed to the idea of long-term enlistments at this period, as the process of engaging men already in the service to enlist for three years or during the war, had been going on for some time, and during the last three months of the year 1776 the General Court had passed various resolves for the encouragement of such enlistments. The Continental Congress had pointed out to all the colonies the fatal weakness of short-term enlistments and had called upon Massachusetts to furnish her quota of fifteen battalions to the continental army to serve for the longer term. The General Court had responded by agreeing to pay 20s. per month and a bounty of £20 to every soldier who would so enlist, in addition to the continental pay. Another resolve, of Jan. 26, 1777, ordered that the commanding officers of the militia companies and regiments should muster their commands and cause to be enlisted, to complete the fifteen battalions required, a number of men equal to one-seventh part of all the male inhabitants of each town or plantation, of the age of sixteen years or upward, to serve for three years or during the war, and to be in readiness to march by the last day of February, 1777.

This resolve is noteworthy because it exempted none but Quakers.

In response to the urgent application of General Washington, that every effort be made to raise without delay the regiment of artillery assigned as part of the quota of Massachusetts, a resolve was passed March 11, 1777, offering a bounty of £20 to each non-commissioned officer and soldier who should enlist for three years or during the war in said regiment. Said bounty was in the form of treasurer's notes of the denomination of £10, payable in four years from their date, with interest to be paid annually at the rate of six per cent. This was the regular bounty offered by the state for continental enlistments at that time, but on the ground that it was not necessary for persons enlisting into an artillery regiment to equip themselves, as was the case with those who went into the marching regiments, the bounty in this instance was reduced to £15.10.

The next call for troops, however, was for short-term service, as on April 12, 1777, a resolve was passed ordering 2,000 of the militia to be detached from the various county regiments for service at Rhode Island, or elsewhere in New England, as ordered, and to serve for a period of two months, unless sooner discharged. It also became necessary to provide anew for the seacoast defence and a resolve of April 21, 1777, directed several companies of artillery (four full companies and six partial detachments) to be raised and stationed at various points, to serve until Dec. 31, 1777, and replace those whose enlistments had expired.

The men engaged under this resolve, however, were held equally liable with the ordinary militia to drafts for service outside of the state.

It having been recommended by General Washington that an effort be made to raise three battalions in addition to the fifteen allotted to this state, a resolve was passed April 30, 1777, offering a bounty of £20 to every non-commissioned officer and soldier who should enlist into said battalions, provided he furnished and equipped himself. In case he was unable to comply with this requirement then the bounty paid was to be only £15.10.

The fear lest the enemy should seize upon the important post of Ticonderoga before the continental forces being raised could proceed thither caused the General Court to pass a resolve on April 30, 1777, directing 1,500 men to be detached without delay from the militia of the county of Hampshire to march to Ticonderoga and there do duty for the term of two months unless sooner discharged.

Various resolves to compel the towns to furnish their proportion of the quota of fifteen battalions for the continental service, were passed from time to time, but they seem to have proved ineffective for the purpose, as on April 30, 1777, a resolve was passed directing that in such towns and plantations as should fail to enlist by May 15, 1777, their proportion of one-seventh part of the male inhabitants as called for by the resolve of Jan. 26, 1777, a draft should be made to complete the number required. The resolve provided that persons drafted should either serve, procure a substitute, or pay a fine, but permitted those drafted to choose the term for which they should serve, viz., either to Jan. 10, 1778, or for three years, or for during the war. The next direct call for troops came in the shape of a resolve, dated May 5, 1777, directing that two regiments of infantry be raised for the defence and security of Boston harbor, to serve for one year from May 1, 1777.

An attempt to strike a blow at Great Britain by the way of Nova Scotia next engaged the attention of the General Court; and a resolve of June 7, 1777, authorized the raising of a regiment of 728 men and a single company of artillery, in the eastern counties, to serve for a term not exceeding six months, and to proceed upon an expedition to the River St. John's. This expedition was to cause a diversion in favor of the colonists, by relieving the exposed settlements at the eastward from the aggressions of the British forces in that neighborhood and by arousing and taking advantage of the active aid and support of those inhabitants of Nova Scotia who were in sympathy with the United States in their struggle for independence. It was even proposed to enlist a regiment in Nova Scotia, should the expedition gain a foothold there and the resolve provided for such enlistment. But the affair came to naught. Certain of the inhabitants of that province did, however, enlist and serve to the credit of Massachusetts and their service duly appears upon rolls in the state's collection of Revolutionary records.

The peculiarly exposed situation of Rhode Island and the necessity of keeping up the Massachusetts contingent of militia detached to co-operate with the local forces, caused the passage of a resolve on June 24, 1777, for the detachment of 1,500 men from the militia, apportioned among the brigades of the various counties, to serve until Jan. 10, 1778, the term of those previously detached to that state expiring July 10, 1777. A resolve of June 27, 1777, made additional provision for this service and directed that two regiments be raised to serve for the term of six months from July 1, 1777.

It became again necessary to order out a portion of the militia to reinforce the Northern army, and on July 2, 1777, it was resolved that the brigadiers of the counties of Berkshire and Hampshire should cause to be mustered and marched to Fort Edward or Fort Ann, as many of the militia as they could get together for the purpose; said detachments to serve until the army could be otherwise reinforced.

Aug. 6, 1777, a resolve was passed directing the Board of War either to purchase or build two armed vessels, to mount 28 or 32 guns each, and fit them out for the service and on account of the state.

The critical position of the American forces after the capture of Ticonderoga by the British caused the General Court to pass a resolve, on Aug. 9, 1777, directing that one-sixth part of the able-bodied men of the training band and alarm lists, not engaged in the service, be at once drafted by the brigadiers of the several counties mentioned in the resolve, and marched without delay to reinforce the army at the northward and that they be continued in the service until Nov. 30, 1777, unless sooner discharged.

The state's proportion of the continental army being still incomplete, owing to the delinquency of many towns and plantations, a resolve was passed, dated Aug. 15, 1777, imposing severe penalties on all military officers, selectmen and others, who should fail in any way to obey the provisions of the resolve, which directed that a number of men equivalent to one-seventh part of the male inhabitants of said delinquent towns or plantations be enlisted for three years or during the war, or drafted for the term of eight months, in order to fill up the deficient regiments.

A secret expedition, as it was called, which had for its destination Rhode Island, was projected in September, 1777, and a resolve of Sept. 16, 1777, directed that a force of 3,000 men, to be made up into four battalions, with one company of artillery, should be detached from the militia of certain counties, to serve for thirty days from Oct. 1, 1777. The governors of Rhode Island and Connecticut were to be made acquainted with the preparations for the expedition and requested to co-operate.

The need of providing a force for the protection of the settlements to the eastward of Cumberland Co. caused the passage of a resolve on Sept. 16, 1777, directing that 300 men, to form three companies, should be raised and kept stationed at Machias until Dec. 31, 1777, unless sooner discharged. Two local companies temporarily in service at Machias were also authorized to be enlisted for the same term and upon the same establishment. The resolve also appointed Col. John Allan to command the Indians in the eastern department, and he was empowered to take into the service and pay of the state such Indians as he should be able to procure and should consider necessary.

No further drafts or calls for troops appear until Dec. 13, 1777, when a resolve was passed, recommending the men of the two regiments serving in Rhode Island whose term of enlistment was to expire Jan. 1, 1778, to re-engage in the same service for twelve months from that date. A bounty of £12 and the same pay and allowances as were granted to soldiers serving in the continental army were offered as inducements.

Jan. 17, 1778, a resolve was passed declaring null and void the resolve of Aug. 6, 1777, by which the Board of War were authorized to build two armed vessels, on the ground that the proposed vessels were too large for the purpose intended, and they were empowered to procure suitable materials for two vessels to mount 16 or 20 guns each.

At the request of General Heath, that the General Court should furnish him a detachment of militia to serve as guards at and about Boston for the greater security of the public stores lodged there, a resolve was passed Feb. 7, 1778, directing that 400 men be detached from certain regiments to serve as guards for the term of three months.

Another detachment of 500 men from the militia, to serve as guards under Major-General Heath at and about Boston, was authorized by a resolve of March 11, 1778, and an additional number of 1,064 men was ordered to be detached for the purpose of relieving the guards stationed at Cambridge, and to serve from April 2, 1778, to July 2, 1778.

The need of making further provision for seacoast defence presented itself and a resolve was passed March 12, 1778, authorizing the enlistment of the various companies and detachments of artillery needed to replace those whose terms of service were about to expire. The resolve fixed the number of men to be raised for the various places where forces were kept stationed, and directed that they should be enlisted to serve to Jan. 1, 1779.

Upon a request of the Continental Congress, that a detachment of the militia be called out to co-operate with those of other states in fortifying and securing the passes of the North River, a resolve was passed April 20, 1778, authorizing the brigadiers of certain counties to detach from their respective brigades a number of men, amounting in all to 1,300, to march to Peekskill and serve for the term of eight months from the time of their arrival at place of rendezvous. Two hundred men were also directed to be detached from the counties of Barnstable and Bristol, to serve for the term of eight months, as a reinforcement to the troops serving at Rhode Island.

Another attempt was made by the General Court to bring up the quota of the fifteen battalions of the continental army to their desired efficiency, by a resolve passed April 20, 1778, which directed that all the companies of the county regiments be assembled, on or before the 11th of May following, and that their officers cause the number assigned to each town as requisite to complete the quota, to be raised by draft, lot or voluntary enlistment, to serve for the term of nine months from the time of their arrival at Fishkill. The number apportioned to be raised was 2,000. Very severe penalties were laid upon any and all who should neglect or evade compliance with the provisions of the resolve, and a fine of £100 for every man deficient was to be incurred by any town or plantation that had not provided its full assigned number by May 20, 1778. It was also recommended to the various towns to endeavor to raise volunteers to serve for the term of six months.

By a resolve of May 1, 1778, gratuities were authorized to be paid to all officers and soldiers who had joined the continental army for three years or during the war, and who could be certified by their commanding officers as having been in camp on or before Aug. 15, 1777; $150 was granted to each field officer, $120 to each captain, subaltern and staff officer, and $100 to each non-commissioned officer and soldier. Another resolve of the same date provided that the necessary funds for these gratuities should be raised by a lottery or lotteries.

The next resolve concerning troops is dated June 12, 1778, and it directed that 1,800 men be detached from the brigades of militia in the various counties, to serve from the time of their enlistment to Jan. 1, 1779; the men so detached to be forwarded, part to the army at the northward, part to Rhode Island, and the remainder to be stationed at various seaport towns. The selectmen of the various towns were authorized to pay out of the town treasuries £14, as bounty or hire, to each man so detached and mustered, and were empowered to assess a tax upon the polls and estates of their respective towns to replace the money so paid.

An alarm caused by the prospect of an attack upon Rhode Island and the pressing need of immediate reinforcements in that quarter, brought about the passage of a resolve on June 16, 1778, directing that the colonels of certain militia regiments detach from their respective commands a number of men, amounting in all to 554, who were to be forwarded without delay to General Sullivan's headquarters, and there do duty until the forces previously ordered to be raised for service in Rhode Island should be available. The resolve expressly provided, however, that the term of service should not exceed twenty-one days from the time of arrival at place appointed.

In addition to the forces needed for active service and for the seacoast defence, it had been found necessary to provide guards for the various public stores and magazines throughout the state and for the troops of the convention (Burgoyne's army). As the time for which those engaged in this service was about to expire, a special enlistment was authorized for the purpose, and on June 18, 1778, a resolve was passed directing that 1,000 men be detached from the militia, to serve as guards under General Heath, at the various places designated by him, from the time of enlistment or detachment to Jan. 1, 1779, unless sooner discharged. It was provided that any person detached for this service who should not within twenty-four hours pay a fine of £10 or provide an able-bodied, effective man to serve in his stead should be considered as a soldier in said detachment, and treated as such unless he could procure from the selectmen or committee of the town or plantation to which he belonged a certificate that he was not, in their opinion, able to serve in person nor of sufficient circumstances to pay the fine. It was also provided that men enlisted or detached should be held and returned for the towns whereof they were inhabitants and no other, and £5 per month, in addition to the continental pay, was promised by the state as an encouragement to such as would enter the service.

The possibility of an attack upon the French fleet, then lying in Boston harbor, and the consequent danger of the town, caused a resolve to be passed on Sept. 17, 1778, directing that a number of men, equal to one-third part of the train band and alarm list, should be detached from the militia of certain of the counties (those of Berkshire, Barnstable, Cumberland and Lincoln counties, with one brigade in Bristol Co. and two regiments in Plymouth Co., being excepted) to serve at and about Boston, or elsewhere, as directed, until Jan. 1, 1779.

At the request of Major-General Gates, who informed the General Court that he stood in need of men to guard the works and magazines at Boston and vicinity, a resolve was passed Jan. 26, 1779, providing for raising 400 men for the purpose, to be formed into four companies and to serve for the term of three months.

Further provision was made for the seacoast defence by a resolve of Jan. 29, 1779, which provided for raising the necessary detachments of artillery to replace those whose terms had expired and fixing their term of service to extend to Dec. 31, 1779.

An enlistment of a special nature was authorized soon after, owing to the representation of General Heath that it was necessary and important that a force of guards should be regularly maintained at Boston, Rutland and Springfield, instead of depending upon detachments from the militia from time to time. Accordingly, by a resolve passed April 15, 1779, four companies, of 100 men each, were authorized to be enlisted to serve as guards at and about Boston, and two companies, of 50 men each, for similar duty, one to serve at Rutland and one at Springfield. Said companies of guards were to be enlisted for three months and to be renewed by three months' terms until no longer necessary.

The situation in Rhode Island again called for attention, and on April 16, 1779, a resolve was passed, authorizing the raising of a regiment of Light Infantry, to serve for eleven months from May 1, 1779, and directing them to be marched as soon as raised to that state, there to do duty until the further order of the General Court.

April 19, 1779, an act was passed empowering the Board of War to purchase and fit out two armed vessels, and an appropriation of £50,000, to be raised by a tax levy on the polls and estates, real and personal, within the state, was authorized for the purpose.

Another resolve providing forces to serve at Rhode Island was passed April 27, 1779, when the General Court requested the council to detach 500 men from the militia of Suffolk, Middlesex, Worcester, Plymouth and Bristol counties, and order them to march without loss of time to Rhode Island, to serve until July 1, 1779.

There was no lack of effort on the part of the General Court to keep up the state's quota of the continental army to its full number and efficiency, but, notwithstanding their addresses, appeals and resolutions, it seems to have been constantly necessary to provide for the enlistment of men for that service. Another of the many resolves to accomplish this purpose was passed May 1, 1779, which directed that 1,500 men be enlisted to serve in the continental army during the remainder of the war; and, to encourage enlistments, the state offered a bounty of $100 in addition to the $200 offered by the Continental Congress, said bounty to be paid each man on passing muster, and an additional sum of $200 was promised at the expiration of six months service.

The next call was to provide troops for service at Rhode Island, in order to keep up the Massachusetts contingent called for by the agreement entered into by the New England states, July 30, 1777, that troops should be furnished for the defence of Rhode Island as long as the enemy maintained a force there. Accordingly, a resolve was passed June 8, 1779, directing that 800 men, or eight companies, should be raised or detached from the militia of the various counties, according to a stated apportionment, to serve from date of enlistment or detachment, until Jan. 1, 1780, unless sooner discharged. In this resolve it was directed that the selectmen of the various towns pay to each non-commissioned officer and private, so detached and mustered, the sum of £30 on passing muster, as hire or bounty, the same to be recovered into the town treasuries by a tax assessed upon the polls and estates of said towns, and all sums so advanced for bounties or hire were to be deducted from the next state tax imposed.

This call was immediately followed by one for a reinforcement to the continental army, issued in consequence of a requisition made by the Continental Congress and embodied in a resolve dated June 9, 1779, which directed that 2,000 men be raised by draft, lot or voluntary enlistment, from the militia of the state, each town or plantation furnishing its stated proportion, and the men so raised to be engaged for a term of nine months from the time of arrival at a place of rendezvous.

The British having effected a lodgment at Penobscot, a resolve was passed June 24, 1779, directing the Board of War to engage as many private armed vessels as they considered suitable, to join with the continental and state armed vessels in an expedition to dislodge the enemy. The owners of such vessels were promised that all losses and damages incurred during the expedition would be made good by the state, and the officers and seamen were to receive the same pay and allowances as those of the continental navy.

Provision was made for land forces to co-operate with the fleet that was to proceed against Penobscot, in a resolve dated June 25, 1779, which directed that the brigadiers of Cumberland and Lincoln counties should each detach 600 men from their respective brigades to serve for the term of two months from the time of their arrival at Penobscot, unless sooner discharged. The resolve also provided that such men as had been previously ordered to be raised in the counties above named, as part of the state's quota of the continental army, should be considered part of the said detachments, and in case the expedition was carried into effect, the counties were to be exempted, for the term of nine months, from raising men for the regular continental service.

Another urgent call from the commander-in-chief of the continental army for reinforcements caused the passage of a resolve on Oct. 9, 1779, directing that 2,000 men, to serve for three months, be raised from the militia of certain of the counties, the number proportioned to each being duly specified.

A resolve to provide the necessary guards for seacoast defence was passed Dec. 25, 1779, authorizing the number required, to be enlisted to serve until Jan. 1, 1781.

It was again found necessary to increase the naval establishment of the state, and on March 21, 1780, a resolve was passed directing the Board of War to procure and fit out two armed vessels, to carry from 12 to 16 guns each. The sum of £100,000 was appropriated for the purpose, to be derived from the sale of confiscated estates and the rents of absentees' estates, in addition to the proceeds of the sale of one of the state vessels already in commission.

The exposed condition of the eastern parts of the state (what is now Maine) and the continual encroachments and depredations of the enemy, made it a matter of necessity that an established force for local defence should be provided, instead of depending upon desultory detachments of the militia as occasion required, and accordingly a resolve was passed on March 25, 1780, directing that 600 men, in addition to two companies previously raised, should be detached from the militia of York, Cumberland and Lincoln counties to serve for the term of eight months. It was provided that the men raised should form one regiment and be stationed as follows: 100 men at Machias, 200 at Camden and the remainder at Falmouth.

Again, on June 5, 1780, another resolve for the purpose of supplying reinforcements to the continental army was passed, this time directing that 3,964 men be raised by draft, lot or voluntary enlistment, from the various towns and plantations, according to a stated schedule, to serve for a term of six months from time of arrival at a place of rendezvous. In this resolve it was provided that a fine of £150 should be imposed upon any person drafted, if considered of ability to pay it, who failed to pass muster or was not able to do effective service, or who should neglect to hire an able-bodied man to serve in his stead: and the fine was to be paid within twenty-four hours after being drafted, failing which, it was to be collected by levy and warrant of distress on his goods and chattels. It was also provided that any able-bodied man who was drafted and should fail to pay a fine of £150 for his release from duty, within twenty-four hours after notice of draft, should be considered as a soldier, to every intent and purpose, for the full term of the draft, and be subject to the penalties for desertion in case of further neglect or refusal to perform service.

An earnest request from General Washington, that in addition to the state's regular quota, a reinforcement of militia should be furnished him for the approaching campaign, brought about the passage of a resolve on June 22, 1780, directing that 4,726 men (the number called for) should be raised from the militia by draft, lot or voluntary enlistment, to serve for three months from the time of their arrival at Claverack on the Hudson.

Another attempt to supply the deficiency in the state's proportion of the continental forces was made in a resolve dated Dec. 2, 1780, in which, after making a patriotic appeal to the people and pointing out the danger and folly of short-term enlistments, the General Court directed that there be immediately raised out of the militia of the state, by voluntary enlistment, 4,240 men, to serve for three years or during the war. A bounty of $50 for each man enlisted and passing muster was promised to every town or plantation which should fill up its quota on or before Jan. 1, 1781, and deliver the men to a receiving officer; and all sums or bounties paid by towns to procure men were to be credited to them in the next state tax. The inhabitants of towns were also permitted to form themselves into classes for the procuring of men, each class to hire or engage one able-bodied man for the service, and the same bounty was to be allowed these classes as allowed the towns.

The comparatively unprotected condition of the eastern part of the Commonwealth again engaged the attention of the General Court, and on March 2, 1781, a resolve was passed that the men raised or to be raised for the continental quota, under the resolve of Dec. 2, 1780, in the counties of York, Cumberland and Lincoln, should be detained for service in said counties until the pleasure of the Continental Congress and of the commander-in-chief should be known in the matter. The governor was also requested to write to General Washington and inform him of the critical position of affairs at the eastward, and desire him to order that the troops raised should be retained for local service. Provision was also made for hiring two armed sloops for coast defence, to be employed until Dec. 1, 1781, upon the regular pay and allowances established for vessels in the service of the Commonwealth.

As the method of procuring soldiers to enlist for the continental service by classes which combined to pay the bounty or hire of a soldier, had proven more successful than any other means adopted, the General Court resolved on Feb. 26, 1781, that the selectmen and assessors of all deficient towns or plantations should class their inhabitants and such others as were liable to pay taxes therein into as many classes as they were deficient in their assigned number. It was provided that, if any class so formed should neglect to procure, and have accepted by the designated muster master, a soldier to serve for three years or during the war, by March 25, 1781, said class should be assessed the average amount of bounty paid to soldiers engaging in the continental service, with 25 per cent. added; the sum so assessed to be collected in the manner authorized for the collection of town taxes.

The next call was made in consequence of a letter from General Rochambeau stating the probability of a sudden attack upon Rhode Island; and in response thereto, the General Court passed a resolve on Feb. 28, 1781, authorizing the governor to issue orders for a body of 1,200 men to be detached from various militia regiments for the term of forty days and marched without delay to do duty at Rhode Island. It was further resolved that the governor might direct any number of the militia that he should consider necessary, to hold themselves in readiness to march at a minute's warning, and order them to Rhode Island whenever in his judgment it became expedient to do so.

The depredations committed by the vessels of the enemy upon the unprotected settlements at the eastward, and the continued appeals of the inhabitants of that section for assistance and protection, caused the passage of a resolve on March 2, 1781, offering as an inducement to private armed vessels that should capture and bring into port, or destroy, any vessel belonging to the enemy found infesting the sea coasts of York, Cumberland and Lincoln counties, or cruising within five leagues thereof, bounties as follows: for each cannon mounted on such vessel and carrying 2 pound shot, £50; for each cannon mounted as aforesaid, carrying 3 pound shot, £60; for each cannon mounted as aforesaid, carrying 4 pound shot, £70; for each cannon mounted as aforesaid, carrying 6 pound shot, £80; for each cannon mounted as aforesaid, carrying 9 pound shot, £120; and for each man taken on board such vessel and belonging to the same, who should be delivered to the commissary of prisoners, the sum of £6. The governor was also requested to write to the admiral of the French fleet, desiring him to order one, and if possible, two, of the frigates under his command, to make a cruise to the eastward, and it was resolved that it was expedient that one of the state armed vessels should be fitted out for a similar purpose. Additional measures were taken to protect the eastern settlements by a resolve passed April 24, 1781, which directed that three companies, 240 men in all, should be raised in York, Cumberland and Lincoln counties for local defence, to serve until Dec. 1, 1781. Two companies were to be disposed and stationed in Lincoln Co., and the third at the port of Falmouth. It was also resolved that two armed sloops, to mount not less than 10 nor more than 14 four or six pounders, should be procured, by hire or purchase, to serve as Guarda Costas. A later resolve, viz., May 19, 1781, authorized the governor to order out one or more companies of the local militia to serve for the immediate defence of the parts adjacent to Penobscot sound, and provision was made for raising in Lincoln Co. an additional company of 70 men, to be stationed where their services should be most needed from time to time, and who should be enlisted to serve for twelve months from May 1, 1781.

Another call to provide troops for service at Rhode Island was made by a resolve dated June 15, 1781, directing that 500 men be detached from the militia of various counties, to serve for the term of five months. A fine of £15 for each man deficient was laid upon every town that should neglect to furnish, within ten days, its proportion of men required under this resolve, the fines to be included in the next state tax.

A detachment of the militia to serve as a temporary reinforcement to the continental army, at West Point or elsewhere, was provided for by a resolve passed June 30, 1781, which directed the governor to issue orders to the brigadiers of the various counties to detach from their brigades the number of men apportioned to them by schedule, the men so detached to serve for three months. The number called for by the resolve was 2,700 and the governor was authorized to form them into four regiments of eight companies each. Towns failing to furnish their proportion by July 10, 1781, were to be subject to a fine of £20 for each man deficient, the same to be assessed upon them in the next state tax ordered. The hire or bounty paid by any town to secure men was to be credited to them, however, in the same tax.

Another call, which proved the last one necessary to supply the deficiency of the Massachusetts line of the continental army, was made by a resolve passed March 8, 1782, wherein it was directed that 1,500 men be raised to serve for three years or during the war, under the usual provisions applying to continental enlistments. The assessors, however, of each town and plantation were directed to class the inhabitants, and every other person liable to pay taxes, in their respective towns, into as many classes as there were men to be raised by the town, "intermixing the poor with the Rich, so as to make the Taxable property and Polls in each Class as nearly equal as may be;" and each person in a class was to contribute toward the hire of a man by the class, in the exact proportion such person was assessed in the previous state tax. Additional resolves respecting this call for 1,500 men were passed on April 26 and June 27, 1782, owing to the fact that it was not promptly responded to, many towns being delinquent in furnishing their proportion of men called for, and the time was extended for complying with its requirements until July 15, 1782; but no further call for troops for continental service appears to have been necessary, — at least, no more appear among the records up to the declaration of peace.

A resolve providing for seacoast defence was passed July 6, 1782, when various small detachments of artillery, to be stationed at Falmouth, Cape Elizabeth, Plum Island, Gloucester, Beverly, Salem, Marblehead, Dartmouth and Plymouth, were authorized to be raised and to be maintained as long as the governor, with advice of council, should deem necessary for the advantage and safety of the Commonwealth.

A communication from General Washington, pointing out the possible danger of an attack upon Boston, caused the General Court to pass a resolve on Sept. 20, 1782, requesting the governor to issue orders to the militia of certain of the counties to hold themselves in readiness to march at a minute's warning to such places as might be designated, and also desiring him to see that the forts and garrisons in and about the harbor of Boston should be properly strengthened and manned. He was also authorized, if necessary, to order any of the militia to march to any of the neighboring states and there do duty for a term not exceeding one month.

At various times throughout the war the council, and the governor as well, drafted or detached portions of the militia to serve for short periods for local defence or at Rhode Island on alarms, but the acts and resolves herein enumerated cover all the really important measures taken to raise or enlist men.

MASSACHUSETTS SOLDIERS AND SAILORS

IN THE

WAR OF THE REVOLUTION.

NOTE.—All names are given exactly as they appear on the original records. The order of arrangement of the facts of service in each individual record given is the same, as nearly as possible, as the original entries, and is as follows: The name; the place of residence, if given; the rank; the kind of document whereon the record appears; the enlistment and discharge, if given; the time of service; remarks.

A discrepancy will sometimes be noted between the service given and the actual service as figured between the dates of enlistment and discharge. The difference is accounted for by the practice of including, with service performed, a time allowance for travel on the basis of one day for every 20 miles out or home. As the same name may appear under various forms, each carrying some portion of a record of service, it is necessary in order to obtain the complete record, as far as preserved, of any given individual, to examine all the forms under which a name is stated to appear in the Record Index.
